

I believe the reason they don't is that the ministers are afraid support will be taken from their churches and the clubs will lose members.

I have seen nothing in the Bible to support integration, and these clubs are certainly not integrated and probably never will be.

Your paper is getting biased towards integration. If your paper cared enough to get the facts, it would find that a very large majority do not want integration, as was proven by the record vote on the Pearsall Plan.

On Every Level

Editor of the Daily News:

I noticed in Public Pulse that some ministers and one or two clubs have endorsed the sitdown strikes at lunch counters. But there are never any names of these ministers and club members published. If they are so proud to uphold this movement, they should at least give their names.

The people thought that was a law to keep segregation, but the Hodges Administration knew better. It wanted integration. I hope the people will not be taken in by pussyfooting politicians, biased newspapers, radio and TV any longer and will stand up and demand segregation on every level.
