

had a few people in those days just as we have today who were all for self and not much morality or Christianity. I think it is time for people of this country of ours to wake up to the fact that the same God who was, is still, our Creator. We should try to live according to His creation.

If the Negro wants to have a more convenient place to eat, then let him get busy and build one or be satisfied with what he has. To me it seems senseless that anyone, white or colored, who has so many opportunities in this wonderful country of ours, should try to invite themselves in where they are not wanted.

I have always been taught and I believe that a college is an institution to cultivate and broaden the mind of a person. It seems as though our colleges today are teaching the students to forget God's creation plan. I think that each one of us should stop and meditate and pray for God's guidance each day. If we do this, I am sure that some of this hatred will be gone and we will find the supreme joy as we have never before experienced.

God's Plan

Editor of the Daily News:

I am convinced that something should be done about this confusion that we are having about segregation. Momentarily we will think back to the creation and remember that God was the Creator. He made all of us. Also He created every living thing to His own choice. If He had wanted the different races to mix, He would not have made them different. He also gave every living thing knowledge of clinging with its own with the exception of a few people who think we should mix and be as one. Let us remember that this was not God's plan.

Although I would like to say I believe in right and wrong, I do not believe in mistreating the Negro. I also believe in the Negro's having equal rights. To my opinion they now have these equal rights that they are protesting for. They have schools and colleges which are very much equal to those of the white. They have the same privilege of going into a business. If they want the same convenience of the white people, why don't they get out and build their businesses and conveniences up to that of the white people or quit trying to take over what the white people have struggled for for so long a time.

Now let us step backward again a few years when the Negro was under slavery. Certainly we know that this was wrong. We
