

were for the people thousands of years ago. He hasn't changed, but we are living as though He has.

If these people will study the lives of Solomon and Sampson, they will find that when these two men, just to mention two, married women from another race, they were turned from worshiping the true God to the idol gods whom their wives served. Both of them went from power to destruction.

If we are going to reduce our nation from a great one, where there is liberty, justice and freedom for all, to a weak nation filled with mongrels, then leave God out of it.

I've made many friends among the colored race. They love me and I them, but they have all said, when I discussed integration with them, that they would rather stay to themselves.

Of course, these were adults and hadn't been brainwashed by some of these wicked powers who are just using our youths to fill their pockets with silver and gold at the expense of the future of our youth both white and colored.

"God Is The Same"

Editor of the Daily News:

I've been reading all the letters that have been written concerning the lunch counter incidents. Everyone seems to have a good reason for thinking as he does. But I would like to have one question answered. It's this: What are these people who are so opposed to this segregation tradition of ours going to do when these young men from the Negro race come calling on their young daughters?

Are the parents going to say, "Why sure, daughter, go on, date him? He's a nice fellow, from a fine home. His father has a good job and has a good income. Just because his skin is a different color from yours doesn't mean he isn't human and, one of God's creation, just as you are. He has just as much right to date you as your white friends." Do you think this won't happen? You are mistaken.

Many of these letters bring God into the picture, just as though the mere mentioning of His name will make their statements true. One writer even stated that when God commanded His people not to marry into another race, it didn't apply to us because that happened in the Old Testament times. Well, in His word, it says that God is the same yesterday, today and forever. His commandments are for us just the same as they
