

Public Pulse

ers, but only interpreters of laws passed by a fully constituted law-making body.

Had our Congress passed an integration law and had such law been held constitutional then it would be the law of the land. Therefore since there is no law of the land there is no one violating any law by opposing integration. Only the Negroes dragging around the lunch counters where they are not wanted by either the owners or the patrons are law violators.

If the Supreme Court has the power to make an integration law and like the power to enforce it by the FBI and even the Army, why all the filibustering in Congress over a civil rights law?

Why doesn't the Supreme Court just make a civil rights law and let Ike take over from there? No, the court doesn't want to get itself in another shameful mess again.

I think like most other whites that when the Negro pops up and even intimates that there are no American citizens it is high time to send Negroes back to the land they are citizens of—Africa. And by the same token some power should be strong enough to remove the whites from Africa back to their own country and maybe provide a separate place in the world for those whites so bent on integration where they can all cry their eyes out for the Negroes and let the rest of the world have a little peace.

O. H. LAMBERT, SR.
Biscoe.

Back To Africa

Editor of the Daily News:

Please consider this as a reply to a letter in the April 18 Daily News entitled "Abide by the Law" by someone signing his name "A&T Student," who was too chicken to sign his name for publication and also to you, Mr. Editor, for your puffing and blowing editorials previously published in behalf of the Negro troublers.

That "chicken" referred to above seemed anxious to get it across that the only American citizens are the Negroes, and those disagreeing with the Supreme Court are not American citizens.

I am no lawyer or lawyer's son, but it should be obvious to any thinking person that there has never been an integration law passed in our country by any law-making body. The Supreme Court is no law-making body, any more than our Superior Court judges are lawmak-